Bryant: P.E. requirements more than physical

Bryant is a woman teaching physical education at College of the Mainland. She is concerned that some students may not understand the importance of physical fitness. Bryant believes that physical education should not just be about physical activity, but also about mental and emotional well-being. She encourages students to participate in sports and other physical activities to improve their overall health.

Racquetball championship tourney played at COM and Lowry Center

The College of the Mainland sponsored a men's dual match. The Class C Men's division took place at COM and the Lowry Center. Mike Barker of Urick played at COM and Lowry Center. Barker went through the pack and won first place. Barker is already looking forward to another match in the future.

Starting an exercise program to fit your needs

To help students overcome this problem, Maryann Urick, coordinator of the Stay Fit program at College of the Mainland, sponsored a workshop on how to start an exercise program. The workshop was designed to inform participants of what type of muscular system and body fat percentages. The tests were given by Cathy Howard, coordinator of the Stay Fit program. Urick, Bryant, and other specifica involving fitness and nutrition are no doubt culpable. The general consensus of students and faculty alike sincerely believes in what he is doing and cares for the participants. Bryant adds, "Those who can, do; those who can't do, teach; and those who can't teach, teach P.E." But I consider myself as much a health educator as a physical education teacher. Spending as much time as possible with them, and may be actually teaching them the art of the pan flute? Would anyone have expected Ed Marinaro to make it to the Big Screen? It seems unlikely, but it happened.

Free Safety check at COM

The Automotive Department at College of the Mainland is planning a free safety check in coordination with the 100-point safety check. Each participant will drive their vehicle through a 100-point safety check. If the car is not safe to drive, they will be required to have it fixed. The Automotive Department will have a certified technician to check the vehicle. If the car is not safe to drive, they will be required to have it fixed.

Soul Brothers return to rock College Hour

"You're a mean one, Mr. Crocodile Dundee," people shout at the familiar face of Paul Hogan at a recent College Hour concert.

The Soul Brothers are a rhythm and blues band that has played for so long that the group can't remember how long they've been together. The groupconsists of musician and showman Greenway, guitarist McKenzie, the original party animal, saxophonist Dundee, bass player Rafe, and drummer McKenzie. They recently performed as the house band for Percy Sledge at the College Hour.

The audience was larger than the Student Activities 100-seat capacity, and the group's sound was as good as ever. They placed their instruments on their laps and started out with the group's signature song "You're a mean one, Mr. Crocodile Dundee." The audience enjoyed it, but the group continued with their own tunes.

Marshall remained in the student photography program for three years and an award-winning photogapher herself, is very enthusiastic about her students. "It's a challenge to teach photography to students in any given class and their individual progress. It's exciting," she said. Besides, the college's photography department will get a third world trip.

Young's views reinforced by third world trip

"I'm a Marxist," Robert Young, a professor of the Marxist theoretical professor, said at the College Hour.

"Butterfly, you think I'm a Marxist," Paul Hogan replied.

"No, I think you're a crocodile," Marshall explained.

Young is a Marxist, and Paul Hogan is a crocodile. But, as Marshall pointed out, "It's fun."

Mean cuisine daily fare at COM cafeteria
BY ROY BILLINGTON
Staff Reporter
The French fries have been pathetically sparse. The meatballs and lasagna seem a bit more prevalent but even that is not too exciting. Just drizzle a little bottled Italian dressing over that and you're finished. One does have to wonder how much expense is going into our cafeteria. Considering the high number of students we have and the amount of food consumed, I find it rather strange that there is so little variety of food. Did we have any say in what is purchased or does it just come from a central food supplier? The only reason I purchased a cheeseburger and fries was because they were the only item I found with a single-digit price. I would have preferred the meatball and a salad but that was only available in the lunch and dinner menus. I was forced to buy something from the carpeted section because that was the only menu I could find that had an item for less than $2.50. When I went to the student center between representatives of the food services, right next to the cafeteria, I was amazed. I would hope that they would apply for the millions of dollars in aid they have to help the cafeteria. Why does the food quality have to suffer just because we have to pay for it? According to the late Robert Kennedy..."I changed my mind..." Yes, I'd been here, Kathye Bergin and Ouida Garber. Since I started attending College of the Mainland I have had sprained arm as a result of the accident. McCullough suffered two broken ribs, a broken leg, a broken arm, and a broken hand, all as a result of the accident. Michelle McCullough was heading for the COM library and an accident occurred. Barricades that were supposed to seal off the student center between representatives of the food services, had been knocked down. When I heard what happened, I was extremely careful when going through there at that particular time. You never know what might happen. My major fear is to have a disease osteogenesis imperfecta, which is an inherited condition in which the bones are abnormally brittle, requiring constant care. Michelle McCullough has been in the hospital several times recently attending to her broken arm in the hospital. Three years after this boycott ended another started that lasted for many months. Cesar Chavez, a 60-year-old man of humble origins, has dedicated his new grape boycott hoping to convince people of the need to give up their old diets...

Old news gives Cruz the blues

By GREG MEAD

"I'm just doing my job," said former congressman from the Republican Party of Texas. "I'm just doing my job." Cruz has been a member of Congress since 1985 and is currently running for re-election. Cruz, who is a former astronaut, has been a candidate for several high-profile races over the years. He lost a race for the Senate in 1990 and has tried to run in other races since then but has not been successful.

There was an article on the front page about the plight of the homeless in the United States. The article was written by a staff reporter for the newspaper. The reporter interviewed several individuals who have experienced homelessness, and the article highlighted the struggles that they have faced. The article also mentioned the efforts that are being made to address the issue of homelessness, such as the work being done by local organizations and government programs.

Would Nancy Reagan have been elected in 1984 if there had been more discussion about her personal life? Some people think that the way she was portrayed in the media contributed to her loss. Would she have been more successful if she had been more open about her experiences with substance abuse? People are still talking about that. Regardless of what happened then, it's important to remember that Nancy Reagan was a strong leader and played a significant role in American politics.

Iran-Iraq. Somehow it feels like these two have been at war for a long time. As a result, there is widespread concern about the possibility of escalation or further conflict.

Many people are discussing the potential implications for the region, including economic impacts and security concerns. There is also a sense of frustration with the lack of progress in negotiations to resolve the conflict.

COM choirs perform, harmonize through four states

By Richard Loyd

Flow Report

"A great time," said one of the Monroe vocal music directors, Robert Green's student group, when invited to perform various concerts in four states. The group had been on the road for three weeks and was about to return home.

The group performed in Louisiana, Texas, Mississippi, and Florida, where they had their last concert, toured the Martin Luther King Jr. MLK Jr. Fest in Montgomery, and gave a concert that "went through the South."

The choir's performances covered various states, and the group had to move from one state to the next quickly. They were able to perform at various venues, including schools, churches, and community centers.

The group's performances were well received, and they were able to interact with the audience, answering questions and sharing stories about their experiences. They were also able to witness the past two weeks of performing, including the excitement and challenges of traveling and performing in different states.

The College of the Mainland intramural basketball program got off to a slow start this year. But the last game of the season, a match between the Pearsall and the Rosharon teams, was a thrilling affair, bringing the excitement of the season to a thrilling finish.

The Pearsall team, led by Their, scored a impressive win over the Rosharon team, 85 to 75, to claim the title of the season. The game was a nail-biter, with both teams putting in a great effort.

The winning team's head coach, Mike Taylor, said, "It was a great game. The players worked hard and were very competitive. I'm proud of them." The losing team's coach, Mike Sanders, added, "We didn't play our best, but we fought hard."

The French-fry has been spotlighted lately. These so-called onion rings with that little red sauce appear to be everywhere. Some fried foods are even placed in a revolving glass case and a bright yellow light shines on them. I have no idea what is in these deep-fat-fried morsels, but I find the taste to be acceptable. It is a pity there are no students who would take up your cause and make a united protest against this daily fare. TheAnyway, there is no need to waste your time and money on these deep-fat-fried morsels.

Time worrying is time wasted

By ROBERT DOWNE

Editor in Chief

There is no one that they have cannot lose one way or another. In a letter to the editor of The Galveston County Press, "Time is the only thing in the world that is unlimited in supply..." It's true. Time is supposed to be a finite resource, yet we often talk about it as if it's endless. How many times have you heard someone say, "If only I had more time..."? It's a common refrain, but it's also a way of overlooking the value we place on our time. Time is valuable, and it's important to use it wisely. So, how do we do that? One way is to focus on what we can control, rather than worrying about what we cannot. This is a simple principle, but it's one that can make a big difference in how we use our time. By focusing on the present and what we can control, we can make better use of our time and achieve more. This is a time to start planning how to use your time wisely. Whether it's work, school, or personal time, make sure you're using it to the best of your ability. The key is to be mindful of how you're spending your time and to make adjustments as needed. By doing this, you can make the most of your time and achieve more. So, let's make this a time to start using our time wisely. It's a time to make choices, take chances, and make our hearts feel more alive.
Proper preparation ensures good test results

Dr. John Hubisz, COM physics instructor, advises students to study ahead of tests. To get the best results in a test or examination, students must study well in advance. This includes reviewing notes and book materials, completing assignments, and understanding the course materials. Dr. Hubisz emphasized that students should try to review material from previous classes to ensure they have a solid foundation. He also advised students to avoid cramming the day before a test and to ensure they have enough rest the night before. Dr. Hubisz encouraged students to ask for help if they are struggling and to take advantage of study groups. He also recommended students to review the course syllabus and study schedule, but take a break when they stop making progress. This approach will help students avoid burnout and ensure they are well-rested for the day of the test.

Proper study techniques and methods can make a significant difference in test results. Students must focus on understanding the material rather than memorizing it. Dr. Hubisz recommended students to break down the material into smaller sections and focus on one section at a time. He also suggested students to practice problem-solving and to take practice tests to get a feel for the types of questions that will be asked. Students should also try to find a quiet and comfortable place to study and to eliminate distractions. Dr. Hubisz emphasized the importance of maintaining a positive attitude and of not giving up when faced with challenges. He recommended students to take breaks and to reward themselves for their efforts. By following these tips, students can improve their test results and ensure they have a successful academic career.

COM art gallery showcases faculty artwork

By J.J. Bozzi

The College of the Mainland (COM) Art Gallery is located in the Performing Arts Center on the Port Neches campus. The gallery showcases faculty artwork and provides something to please everyone's taste. The COM Art Gallery is a popular destination for students and members of the community, who come to enjoy the range of art on display.

The gallery features a variety of art forms, including paintings, sculptures, and photographs. The art on display is created by faculty members and their guests, who have been invited to showcase their work. The gallery is open to the public and is free to attend.

The gallery is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday. It is located in the Performing Arts Center on the Port Neches campus. The gallery is a great place to spend an afternoon and enjoy some art.

Transferring courses from one college to another is a two-way street. As students move in and out of Culver-Stockton College, courses are transferred in and out. While students may want courses from Galveston or COM, they may not want courses from Galveston or COM. This is because the curriculum at each college has different requirements. This is why students must have a comprehensive understanding of the requirements at each college if they plan to transfer. They must also have a comprehensive understanding of the requirements at each college if they plan to transfer.

COM says no to intercollegiate sports

By MICHAEL MURPHY

Staff Reporter

The College of the Mainland has had a history of cutting sports programs. This year, they have decided to cut the physical education program. In the past, the administration has justified these cuts by stating that students do not want to participate in sports. However, according to Jerry Bryant, the coach for the past five years, students are just as interested in sports as they are in other extracurricular activities.

Bryant: COM physical education slighted

By MICHAEL MURPHY

Staff Reporter

The administration's explanation for the cuts is that students do not want to participate in sports. However, according to Jerry Bryant, the coach for the past five years, students are just as interested in sports as they are in other extracurricular activities. Bryant believes that the cuts are just a way for the administration to justify their lack of support for sports programs. Bryant feels that the administration should be more concerned with the development of the students' overall education. He feels that sports programs are an integral part of the college experience and should be given the same level of support as other extracurricular activities.

Sohn lectures on evolution of culture in motion pictures

Sohn, who spoke at the College of the Mainland in the Department of COM's library, is the Fine Arts Department head at the University of Minnesota in Minneapolis and has served as president of the National Association of Theatre Schools and the American Theatre Foundation. He has developed a theater program at the University of Minnesota which teaches basic aspects of theatrical production and view a series of films on acting. Smith aims to challenge students' social values

Westin says, "Going into the class gives students more experience. In this course, they got an idea of the different types of theater. They saw that theater is a very important aspect of history. Unfortunately that's one of the problems of today's education. From a consensus point of view it's purpose is to allow you to think, to act on those convictions. This is an escape mechanism for the working class."

Donna Treadwell and Garry Upton are finalists in the top 7 percent of the college's theater department. They are among 180 entries at the College of the Mainland's annual photo contest, which closed March 10. The contest is sponsored by the Audio-Visual Department in the Fine Arts Department. The college's theater department holds seven auditions a year to determine scholarship eligibility. The college has six productions a year, but only four from fall through spring are full productions. The other two are one-act plays that begin as auditions and then become productions during the span of time between them. The department's second tour of New York this year was March 11 through March 21. The department is currently working with the Houston's Nina Vance Theater where they will get a chance to work with Barbara Eden. Westin says, "going into the class gives students more experience. In this course, they got an idea of the different types of theater. They saw that theater is a very important aspect of history. Unfortunately that's one of the problems of today's education. From a consensus point of view it's purpose is to allow you to think, to act on those convictions. This is an escape mechanism for the working class."

Editor graduates, eyes writing career

Bill Murphy

A senior English major at the University of Houston, Bill Murphy will graduate this spring and enter the job market. Murphy has been a reporter for Exxon and currently works for the InterCOM campus newspaper. He also is the communications director of the Student Government Association here at COM.

Murphy's interest in journalism was accidental. He had planned to pursue a career in advertising but a journalism class intrigued him.

"I think it was sort of a fluke," Murphy said. "I was thinking about being a copywriter in advertising but I had to do a paper on journalism for my English class at College of the Mainland. After that I thought I had a pretty good ability for it and I decided to go after a career in journalism." Murphy plans to continue his education at Texas A&M this fall and work as a reporter on the InterCOM in the meantime.

He has seen many improvements in the student paper. "There has been an increase in the number of advertising pages, which is an important source of revenue," Murphy commented. "We also have more content than ever before, which is a tribute to the editors and writers that put it together." Murphy said he thinks the biggest improvement has been in the quality of the content, which he feels is definitely on the rise.

"I think the student paper is a great outlet for student expression," Murphy said. "It allows us to write about issues that are important to us and to share our ideas with the rest of the campus. I enjoy working on the paper and hope to continue doing so in the future." Murphy has been a part of the InterCOM staff for four years and has held the position of city editor.

Despite his enthusiasm for the paper, Murphy said he is aware of some problems that exist. "We have to deal with some lack of advertising, but I think we have a strong enough staff to keep the paper going," Murphy said.

Increasing Inmate Literacy

B. L. Klaes

Dr. B. L. Klaes, the incoming dean of instruction at the College of the Mainland, has made improving inmate literacy a priority for the college. Klaes has been a professor at COM for 15 years and is well respected by his colleagues.

"I think it's important to improve the literacy levels of the inmates," Klaes said. "It's a great way to help them improve their lives and get on the right track. I'm going to do everything I can to help improve their literacy levels." Klaes said he plans to work with the prison system to increase the number of classes offered and to improve the quality of the classes.

Modern misconceptions fuel AIDS panic

BY MARK KENNEDY

"Whatever causes the spread of AIDS is not known," Pan American Health Organization official Carlos de la Cueva told the International AIDS Conference in October. "But myths and misinformation are spreading as rapidly as the disease itself," he said.

"This is not a new disease and there is no cure," Cueva said. "But myths about what is the cause and how to prevent it are spreading through society like a virus.

Cuba, which has had a very low incidence of AIDS, has spent $700 million to fight the disease. It has been able to control its spread by promoting the use of condoms and by offering free medical care.

"We have to understand that the people who are fighting this disease are the ones who have the most to lose," Cueva said. "They are the ones who will pay the price if we don't get the facts right.

Ignorance has lethal impact

Dr. Hubisz questions monkey business

"It's impossible to prevent the spread of AIDS," said Dr. Hubisz, a virologist at the National Institutes of Health. "But we can control it by changing our behavior.

"If we don't change our behavior, AIDS will become an epidemic," Hubisz said. "And we'll lose our health care system.

"We need to get the facts right," Hubisz said. "But we can't do that if we don't have the facts right.

Urbina shares enthusiasm for Latin American history

Dr. Michael Urbina, a historian at the University of Texas, said he is excited about the new interest in Latin American history.

"It's wonderful to see people interested in the history of Latin America," Urbina said. "But we have to be careful not to let our enthusiasm get in the way of the facts.

"We need to understand that the history of Latin America is not just a series of events," Urbina said. "It's a story of people and cultures.

COM students exhibit art in gallery

By STACY GILBERT

College of the Mainland Art and Humanities Division is holding an exhibit on campus of Community College of Mainland students.

"The show is held in the main gallery of the Center for the Arts," said Michael Dahlin, art coordinator for the division.

The exhibit features work by students in the College of the Mainland's art program, including photos, paintings, and sculptures. The exhibit will be on display until April 30.

When Coke machines lead to early death

"I was surprised to hear that the machine caused death," said the deaconess of the church where the incident occurred.

The deaconess said that she was working in the church's kitchen when a machine broke down.

"I heard a noise and thought it was just the machine," said the deaconess. "But then I saw the body on the floor."
Harris dedicated to excellence in academics

Harris, a native of New Orleans, Louisiana, has been a student at the University of Oregon in Eugene, where he has achieved academic excellence. Harris' dedication to his studies has been evident throughout his academic career, earning him a spot among the university's top students. His commitment to his studies has not only earned him recognition on campus but also outside the university, as he has participated in several honor societies and received numerous awards for his academic achievements.

New anti-smoking fervor borders on fascism

In recent years, there has been a growing anti-smoking movement that has sought to ban smoking in public places. This move has been met with resistance from some quarters, with some arguing that such bans border on fascism. One company, however, has taken a different approach to the issue. Division, Inc. declares that "The only truly safe, effective way to create designated smoking areas as a first step to this goal."

Harris came to College of the Mainland in 1980, where he continued his excellent work, including his role as a member of the history club. He was also involved in other campus organizations, which helped him develop leadership skills. After graduation, he went on to pursue his career, working in various fields and earning recognition for his contributions.

Graduation set

College of the Mainland's 1988 graduation ceremony will be held on Saturday, May 15, at 7 p.m., in the college's gymnasium. The event is free and open to the public. The graduation ceremony will feature speeches from the college's administration and music from the college's choir. The ceremony will also include the presentation of new degrees and certificates to the graduates.

The choir, which has been supported by the college's music department, has been preparing for the graduation ceremony for several months. The choir has been working hard to prepare for the event, and the members are excited to perform for the students and their families.

The college's administration is also excited to see the students graduate and move on to the next step in their lives. The college is proud of the achievements of its students and looks forward to seeing them succeed in their future endeavors.

The college's administrators have also emphasized the importance of exercising one's right to vote. "The right to vote is a fundamental right of all American citizens," said Dr. Smith, the college's president. "It is essential that we use this right to make our voices heard and to ensure that our voices are heard."

The college's administration encourages all students to exercise their right to vote in upcoming elections. "We strongly encourage all students to register to vote and to exercise their right to vote," said Dr. Smith. "It is essential that we use this right to make our voices heard and to ensure that our voices are heard."

The college's administration is also working to support the community's efforts to increase voter turnout. The college is hosting a series of voter registration drives and is encouraging its students to participate in these drives.

COM shows its many faces

The photographs on these pages are intended to show a glimpse of some of the scenes and activities which made up the spring semester at the College of the Mainland.

The semester ushered in the beginning of some physical improvements to the campus; construction areas are everywhere.

People began to move outdoors as the weather became warmer.

The indoor activities at the Student Center, which were the norm early in the semester, gave way to outdoor events. Now, most everyone is afflicted with spring fever.

Although we face a staggering amount of distractions, we must somehow struggle to maintain our study habits just a short while longer. Meanwhile, summer is trying to seduce us.

Modern misconceptions fuel AIDS panic

BY MARK KENNEDY

"Some people continue to hold on to the belief that AIDS can be acquired from mosquitoes or by touching an AIDS sufferer. These misconceptions are not only dangerous but also contribute to the spread of the disease, particularly among children." - Dr. Lila Major

By LISA MAJOR

As awareness of AIDS has increased, misconceptions about the disease have also spread. One of the most prevalent is the belief that AIDS can be transmitted by mosquitoes. This is not true, and such misconceptions can lead to misinformation and fear among the public.

Staff Reporter

AIDS has been a significant problem in the United States, and its impact on the country has been significant. It is estimated that there are approximately 1 million people living with HIV in the United States, with an estimated 10,000 new infections occurring each year. The disease is caused by the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), which targets the immune system and can lead to a wide range of symptoms, including severe and life-threatening conditions.

The disease is primarily transmitted through sexual contact, intravenous drug use, and vertical transmission from mother to child. However, there is no evidence to suggest that the disease can be contracted through mosquito bites.

The misconceptions about AIDS have had a significant impact on the way the disease is perceived and treated. In many cases, people are hesitant to seek medical treatment or support because of the fear of being stigmatized or ostracized. This can lead to a delay in diagnosis and treatment, which can have serious consequences.

Despite the continued spread of misinformation, there has been a significant increase in knowledge and awareness about the disease. This has been due in part to the efforts of organizations like the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) and the World Health Organization (WHO), which have worked to educate the public about the disease and its transmission.

In addition, there has been a significant increase in research and development of treatments and vaccines for the disease. While a cure for AIDS has not yet been found, there are currently several treatments available that can help manage the symptoms and slow the progression of the disease.

As the world continues to grapple with the challenge of AIDS, it is important to continue to educate the public about the disease and its transmission. By dispelling misconceptions and promoting accurate information, we can work together to prevent the spread of the disease and support those who are affected by it.
Editor graduates, eyes writing career

By PATRICIA GAFNI

Now that the Editor, Michael Murphy, has graduated from St. Andrew's, he's entered the world of professional writing. Murphy was editor of the Student Daily while he was at COM. He graduated from COM in 1988, majoring in Mass Communication.

Murphy's future should be bright. He has been involved with Murphy's interest in journalism was accidental. He had thought of entering the medical field, but that changed when Dr. William Anderson, Rosalind Ellis and Jonathan Sowell encouraged him. "I don't know what aspect of writing I might like to get into," Murphy commented. "I think it comes to fruition through a suggestion by Dr. William Anderson. He told me I had a knack for writing and that I should pursue it." Murphy decided to become a reporter while he was in college. He wrote for the Student Daily, and is now working for a newspaper in Austin.

Irritating ads assault senses

By DAVE ROSEN

A good soul had just walked off the street after warning the reader not to be fooled by the advertisements in the paper. The message was clear: Don't be fooled.

But then came the ads. And they were everywhere. The most irritating were the ones that promised to revolutionize your life. "You can do it today!" the ads boasted. "Just pay us $100 and we'll show you how to make millions!"

These ads are not only annoying, they are also often misleading. Many of the products advertised are of questionable quality, and the promises are often false. The ads are designed to catch your attention, not to inform you.

Super students prepare for summer

By LINDA BASS

The summer is fast approaching, and two of the students at COM are preparing for a unique opportunity. Cassandra Rodriguez and Robert Smith are part of the Super Students program at COM.

The program is designed to help minority students who are interested in science and technology. The students will spend the summer at the University of Texas at Austin, where they will work with scientists and researchers.

"We're here to help minority students who are interested in science and technology," said Rodriguez. "It's a great opportunity for us to learn more about the field and to meet other students who share our interests."

Increase

By ANDREA BASS

The number of minority students at COM has increased significantly in recent years. According to Dr. Don Bass, dean of Instruction, the number of minority students at COM has grown from 10 to 50 in the past five years.

"This is a great accomplishment," said Bass. "We are committed to providing an educational environment that is welcoming and inclusive for all students."

Teleconference

On April 14, minute, the Student Daily conducted a teleconference with Spanish teacher Cruz at COM. Cruz is one of the first Hispanic teachers at COM and is well respected by his students.

"I think it's important for students to have a role model who looks like them," said Cruz. "It's great to see a Hispanic teacher at COM, and I hope that other Hispanic students will be inspired by me."
